Well, Which is it?

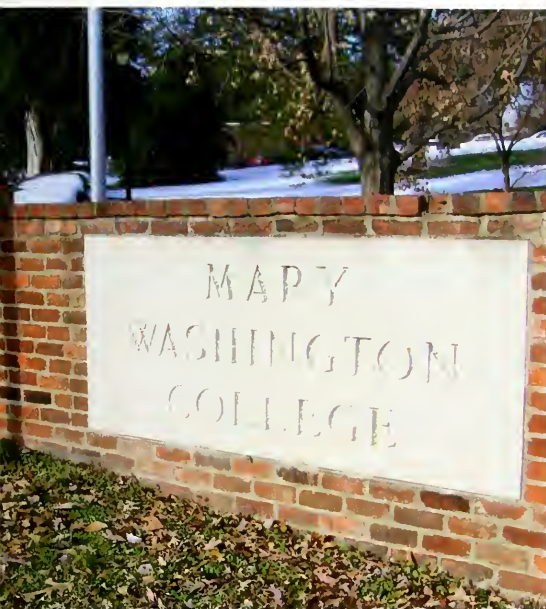

The University hangs on to aspects of Mary Washington College

The administration spent the summers of 2004 and 2005 attempting to smoothly transition to university status. One year after the name change, many students still felt a connection with Mary Washington College. Occasionally, an email addressed to tturn51q@mw.edu still became lost in cyberspace. When applying to graduate schools, many seniors found that the online applications did not list the University of Mary Washington as an option, but they felt a little warm inside when forced to select their good friend MWC. For the most part, few signs remained of our college's past, but the Battlefield went undercover to reveal some last vestiges of Mary Washington College. If you ever loved MWC, this is for you.

All Hallows Eve

with Halloween costumes.*

Halloween was a time of celebration and fun for the University of Mary Washington. Many students dressed up to hide who they really were or even to show a side of themselves usually kept quiet. Many simply enjoyed the creative license to create a costume from their imagination or to replicate a common household item such as a tube of toothpaste. Others enjoyed letting loose and wearing something exotic or revealing, but no matter what the costume, it was a way to express themselves and have a good time. While many parties were held throughout the week, there was one party that students looked forward to the most. The underground fraternity held its annual Halloween party and costume contest at Central Station on Thursday during the week of Halloween. Many students graced the dance floor for the entire night and there was no end to the creativity when it came to costumes. Just a few examples from this year include a tube of Crest toothpaste, a rain cloud, a six-pack of Corona, and of course the requisite schoolgirl and Playboy bunny costumes. Whatever the choice of costume, most enjoyed more the company of good friends and the (almost) never-ending supply of candy.

The Golden Years

Revamping the First Year Experience

FYE GOLD was a freshman program which provided first year students with a unique opportunity to perfect their leadership skills. The small number of students (45) who participated by being selected from a pool of applications had the chance to take part in various volunteer programs on campus and throughout Fredericksburg. The FYE participants also worked with faculty outside of the classroom to build portfolios, which will aid them in finding a job after college. FYE students also had the opportunity to reflect on their freshman year, by way of weekly journals and group meetings, in order to help them be more successful later in life.

Love that Rock and Roll

Local and visiting bands rock UMW

Concerts were a fun and enjoyable experience for most everyone, and thanks to Giant Productions, the UMW community had plenty during the year. Most concerts were held in Great Hall, an intimate setting where the performers could easily interact with their audience. Before, during and after the concerts, performers sold their merchandise and followed the concert by mingling with the crowd to sign autographs, a dream come true for hardcore fans especially. The year brought the likes of Phantom Planet, the group famous for the “California” theme song of the popular show The OC. During Homecoming week, Giant Productions brought in OK Go, and during the spring semester, the groups Men Women and Children, the Matches, The Format, and Motion City Soundtrack came to UMW for a whirlwind evening full of good music, friends and especially dancing. No matter what your favorite genre of music, concerts were a good way to break away from the ordinary. They provided entertainment on boring weeknights and even gave students the opportunity to see some performers headed for greatness.

take me HOME

Homecoming week was full of fun

Homecoming week at the University of Mary Washington is perhaps one of the most anticipated events of the year. This year's theme was "shake your tail feather" and events were held all week in an attempt to get students to let loose and do just that. With a barbeque and bonfire to start the weekend off, a dance the following night, the requisite soccer games, a concert and fireworks Saturday night to end the weekend just right, there were many events and chances to get out and have some fun. The whole week was devoted to various spirit activities that got the whole campus involved. This year, spirit contest activities included an art contest, a volleyball game, a scavenger hunt, hall decorating, and a float contest. A record was kept of who won each event and at the end of the week the residence hall with the most points won the spirit contest. Another notable aspect of Homecoming was the return of the alumni who come to check out the campus, reconnect with old friends and even visit those who have not yet graduated. With so many activities planned and people to see, there was never a dull moment and Homecoming week was enjoyed by all.

Make a Difference

Students spend time with community children

Mary Washington students hosted and led 70 local children, ages two to sixteen, in its 5th annual celebration of Make a Difference Day, a nationwide holiday designed to encourage volunteer work within the community. The event, which was sponsored by COAR, began with a skit involving pirates and missing treasure with the message that helping those in need is "worth its weight in gold." The 100 Mary Washington volunteers then spread out around campus, chaperoning the children in various activities. They made "thank you" cards to send to troops in Iraq and goody bags to send to Hope House, a local shelter. Participants also made a quilt with each of their handprints to be hung in the Fredericksburg Fire Department Rescue Squad. For each project completed, the kids received plastic gold coins and for each coin they received, they sponge-painted a coin on the program banner, featuring a treasure chest. At the end of the program, the Mary Washington chaperones and children met in Great Hall for pizza and were presented with their banner covered with painted gold coins, representing their hard work and the difference they had made in their community.

UMW Globe-trotters

Students visit Spain, Scotland, and Italy

The Study Abroad Program at the University of Mary Washington is administered through International Academic Services (IAP) and has strict requirements. The student must have already completed 12 credits and declared a major, hold a GPA of 2.0 or above, and should not be on academic probation. Students are responsible for applying about a year in advance to the trip and making sure that their credits transfer. UMW offers informational workshops on the necessary steps and requirements to apply to the program, several times a year.

Usually, students study in a country in which they want to practice the language; others may choose places that have a specific course offering that they are interested in for their major.

UMW offers a variety of study abroad programs, some specific to an academic department. The school has Study Abroad Programs in Italy, Australia, Iceland, Egypt, and Spain. No matter which port of call students select, all agree the Study Abroad Program was a memorable part of their college experience.

The Frozen Chosen

working, or expanding friendships*

Winter Break officially began on December 17 and not a moment too soon by the estimation of most students. After a semester of hard work and an exhausting week of finals, the four week reprieve was well deserved. Most students headed home to enjoy the holidays with their families, while others set off for distant vacation destinations, ranging from sandy beaches to frigid ski slopes. Many students picked up jobs to fill their time off, eager to earn a few extra bucks, while others spent their days sleeping late and enjoying some much needed rest and relaxation. The winter break provided each student with a chance to unwind from academic stress and recharge for the second semester.

The UMW Ambassadors serve as liaisons between the students, university, community, and the alumni, which consist of over 29,000 people worldwide. They attend regional alumni events in Washington DC, Richmond, and Baltimore, staff the new Jepson Alumni Executive Center, and assist at homecoming and reunion weekends. The UMW Ambassadors also help the Fredericksburg Alumni Chapter assemble and distribute survival kits for Halloween, finals, Valentine's Day, and birthdays. In October, the Ambassadors helped staff the annual Fredericksburg Forum, featuring former Sec. Madeleine Albright, Gen. Wesley Clark, and Former Sec. Lawrence Eagleburger, as ushers and ticket takers. In November the ambassadors hosted Derek Bottcher, of the class of '96, to talk about his experiences at Mary Washington and his career.

Bringin' Home the Bacon

Students earn money through campus employment

Many people come to school expecting to find a job on campus where they can do homework and earn some extra spending money. The Office of Financial Aid coordinates all student employment on campus. Students are asked to fill out an application and rank the top three jobs or departments in which they would like to work. Unfortunately for many students, once the applications are turned in, they never hear back from the Office of Financial Aid; however some students are lucky enough to acquire jobs on campus. These jobs range from desk aiding in residence halls to the recreation center, or assisting in various departments including the History, English, or Foreign Language Departments. Students can even obtain jobs as lifeguards at Goolrick Pool or as cataloging or reference aids at Simpson Library. The jobs offered on campus are varied and challenging for those students lucky enough to find one.

Ready, Set, Play

Students compete on intramural teams

Sports enthusiasts looking for a more low-key environment to show off their skills found their home in the campus recreation intramural program. Indoor/outdoor basketball, tennis, volleyball, indoor/outdoor soccer, crab soccer, golf, and even arm wrestling, as well as a few others, made the list for intramural activities this year. Students organized their own teams and submitted registration forms to the Fitness Center in order to be added to the list. Fun team names, a relaxed atmosphere and a shared interest in sports made the intramurals a blast for everyone involved.

Betting on a Sure Thing

Playing poker for charity & fun

In January, COAR and Giant teamed up to sponsor the 2nd Annual Charity Poker Tournament. Generous students paid $10 to participate in the event (t-shirt included), and all proceeds went to Habitat for Humanity. On game day, students crowded into Great Hall and were randomly assigned to a poker table. While the Texas Hold 'Em competition ensued, COAR and Giant volunteers raffled off a variety of prizes and kept the crowd under control. The tournament lasted throughout the day, but the lucky winners won electronic prizes and pretty cool trophies. Following the event, COAR and Giant proudly handed $1200 to Fredericksburg Habitat, a group that builds adequate homes for families in need.

Living in the Fred

Students take advantage of shops and eats in Fredericksburg

The Fredericksburg community provided an atmosphere fit for relaxation and fun. Many students enjoyed studying or talking with friends at one of the local coffee shops. Hyperion Espresso in the downtown district was a particularly popular spot, located within walking distance from campus. Other students frequented the downtown bars for college night specials or live music. Central Park offered a wide array of shopping choices, as well as the typical selection of chain restaurants. Many students made regular trips to Chipotle for a giant burrito and a free soda.

Several local businesses, including Panera Bread and Maggie Moo's Ice Cream, offered discounts to students. The community also sponsored many highly anticipated events. The annual holiday parade downtown was popular, despite freezing temperatures. Students enjoyed the variety of businesses in the community, but appreciated the small town feel of the area.

Let it Snow, Snow, Snow

Students enjoy winter weather

Snowy days allowed students to have some fun outside. Some students took trays from Seacobeck and used them as makeshift sleds, while others preferred to instigate snowball fights or decorate campus with snowmen. Everyone was excited by the prospect of cancelled classes, and as tradition demanded, some students slept with their pajamas inside out in hopes of waking up to a snow day. At last, all snow dances payed off, and an end of the semester miracle occurred- a snow day on the last day of classes gave students an extra day to study for finals, but most preferred to make snow angels and take afternoon naps.

Saturday Night Fever

Weekends at UMW are hot, hot, hot!

Throughout the year, OSACS, Seacobeck Catering, Giant Productions, as well as other groups from campus came together to bring the students entertainment on Saturday nights. Better known as Eagle Nights, these events were held nearly once a month throughout the semester, aiming to present students with an alternative to drinking. Most events had high attendance and were held between 11pm and 1am with free breakfast at midnight. These events included a showing of The Breakfast Club with raffles and a bingo night with prizes, including CDs, DVDs, stereos, video games, a karaoke machine, a digital camera, DVD player and the best prize of all: an iPod. Past Eagle Nights events have included an 80's Dance sponsored by Bail Hall and Live Karaoke sponsored by Giant Productions.

The Night Dragged On

PRISM sponsors a drag fashion show

PRISM's annual drag show was a huge hit this year. Co-sponsored by the Anarchist Social Theory Club, the show drew students and faculty to Great Hall as one of the largest events put on by the club promoting the interests of people from sexual minorities. The amateur student competitors faced a panel of faculty judges, with awesome awards going to the best dressed and most convincing of participants. A professional MC added extra flair and got the crowd involved and laughing. A great time was had by all, and the bar was raised for the costumery of next year's contestants.

For Love of the Game

Spring Spirit Week culminates with a basketball game for Locks of Love

An effort to pump up the level of Eagle enthusiasm around campus led to the creation of Spring Spirit Week. During the week of February 13-17, Class Council hosted a myriad of events for the student body, ranging from a Battle of the Sexes to Open Mic Night at the Underground, to a series of relays and a cross-campus scavenger hunt. Points from each activity, as well as "Mdub" class t-shirt sales were tallied with bragging rights going to the most spirited class. The week was capped by a pep rally and concert by Here Today and Sparky's Flaw, complete with fireworks, at the Battlegrounds on Friday night. Students will always remember the ridiculous things they did to show their Eagle pride and the fun times they had celebrating Spirit Week with their friends.

A New Mr. President

Dr. Frawley is inaugurated

In February of 2005, President Anderson announced plans for retirement, and the Board of Directors set about the arduous task of finding a new leader to take the helm of the administration. In February 2006, a Presidential Search Advisory Committee narrowed a list of possible candidates to three, all having impeccable credentials and years of experience. After extensive reviews, meetings and forums for the candidates, Dr. William J. Frawley, of George Washington University, was announced as UMW's next president. Dr. Frawley's broad range of experience in academic administration, as well as lecturing, fundraising, and specialization in the field of linguistics set him apart from the other candidates, and made the administration proud to gain such a great leader. Dr. Frawley assumes official duties on July 1, 2006.

With this Ring, I Thee Prank

Junior Ring Week carries the tradition of good, not always so clean, fun

The Junior Ring Week was a traditional event at the University of Mary Washington during the end of March; the 2006 event was set from March 9 to March 14. The week celebrated those students preparing for their senior year by presenting the University's ring to the students in the Junior Ring Presentation Ceremony on Friday, March 24 at 7 pm. Invitations were mailed to the Juniors and their families for the event.

Unfortunately for the Juniors, however, the week was also traditionally free game for the other classes to play pranks on them. The week full of pranks and activities, such as scavenger hunts and relays, culminated with the Junior Ring Dance.

Devil Goat Day presents a distraction from spring finals

A time-honored tradition, Devil Goat Day was held on April 27th, 2006. The event pitted odd numbered classes called the “Devils”- '09 freshmen and '07 juniors, against even numbered classes labeled as “Goats”- '08 sophomores and '06 seniors. The classes competed for bragging rights, but all attendees were winners with participation in amazing interactive amusements, including a mechanical bull and human foosball. Many students were drawn to Ball Circle by the promise of free food, plastic cups and coveted t-shirts emblazoned with the Devil Goat Day '06 cartoon design. The event, sponsored by Class Council, was a smashing success and brought students from different classes together for a fun afternoon.

Facebook takes over students' lives in a big way

In an ever-expanding search for reasons to procrastinate, students hit the jackpot with the discovery of Facebook: an online networking site for students attending colleges and universities in the United States. Students logged into the site with a college email account and by confirming others as "friends" were able to view profiles of friends and acquaintances. Facebook had a certain addictive quality, and students found themselves constantly updating their profiles including pictures, personal information, interests, or checking friends' profiles for updates. "Wall posts" were also popular, a cyber whiteboard on each member's profile perfect for shout outs or impromptu party invites. Even The Battlefield used Facebook to track down members of clubs and student names for captions. Facebook proved useful for making new friends, tracking down old ones, or just wasting a little time.

Party night

Seniors count down to graduation

To celebrate their accomplishments over the past few years, seniors flocked to Great Hall for Senior Countdown. The event marked 100 days until the excitement of Grad Ball and graduation. Ecstatic seniors spent the evening gambling with play money in hopes of earning one of the fancy prizes provided. Students could change their money into chips then try their luck at Texas Hold 'Em or Craps. Other students stuck to the slot machines desperately awaiting a lucky combination.

Seniors who preferred to hold onto their "cash" could test out the oxygen bar at no charge.

The bar provided a sensory overload "high" by combining scented oxygen with flashing strobe light glasses. At the end of the night, students could bid on prizes ranging from books and kitchen utensils to iPods and boats, capping a fabulous evening of fun.

Spring in Your Step

Students relax during Spring Break

By the time March 4 rolled around, students were going stir-crazy, ready to devote some time to anything but studying. Drove of students packed up and headed off to the tropical destination of their dreams, while others opted to hit the slopes, in search of a winter wonderland. For many students, exhaustion or necessity made "home" their prime target, and many hours were logged catching up on sleep and with friends and family. Still, a select few other students chose to use their spring break to help others; groups headed for the Gulf Coast to assist in the on-going effort to repair damage from Hurricane Katrina. One pack of UMW students participated in an "alternative spring break," and spent the week building houses with Habitat for Humanity. While some vacations were more eventful than others, all seemed to agree spring break was a great time to get away from classes, books, and Seaco.

Celebrate Diversity!

Multicultural Fair introduces students to different cultures

The annual Multicultural Fair at Mary Washington was one of the most popular of all events. The day, held in early April, was dedicated to promoting diversity and allowing students to experience different cultures. The James Farmer Multicultural Center and Multicultural Student Affairs worked with interested students in organizing the festival, while various campus clubs, music groups and teams contributed their parts. Many of Fredericksburg's cultural restaurants sold food at the event, and the fair attracted thousands of people who came to celebrate international food, fashion, and music. This year there was a variety of dance performances such as the traditional Bolivian dance and the Irish step dance, and Aikido students demonstrated some martial arts moves for the public. Also, there were activities for children, including crafts, face painting, making piñatas, and games, which were hosted by many clubs. Though dismal weather forced performances to be moved indoors, music from gospel to rock was a major attraction to the public. Overall, the event was a success made possible by everyone's participation.

Combs Hall

Combs Hall is home to the Modern Foreign Language, English and Historic Preservation departments. Combs Hall is home to the Modern Foreign Language, English and Historic Preservation departments at UMW. The Modern Foreign Language Department offers majors in Spanish, German, and French language and culture, as well as classes in Arabic and a special major in Italian Studies. The Historic Preservation Department is the first and largest of its kind in the nation. Students have the opportunity to focus on the maintenance, conservation and interpretation of historic sites and structures and on cultural resource management, folklore, archaeology and museum studies. The department offers many hands-on learning opportunities, given the rich history of the Fredericksburg area. The English major, offered by the Department of English, Linguistics and Speech, emphasizes the development of analytical and creative skills, as well as an understanding of language and culture through literature. The department sponsors activities such as the poetry/fiction reading series and invites qualified students to join Lambda Iota Tau, a national honor society for those studying literature.

Trinkle Hall houses the Mathematics Department, the Department of Classics, Philosophy and Religion, the Technology Assistance Center, the Technology Training Center, and the Leidecker Center for Asian Studies. E. Lee Trinkle was the governor of Virginia in the 1920s. When control of Mary Washington College passed to the State Board of Educators in 1930, Mr. Trinkle was president of the board. When the college desperately needed a library in 1938 for its overflow of books being housed in Virginia Hall, Mr. Trinkle took a personal interest in seeing that funds for the library were made available. The building was built in the late 1930s, with a cost totaling more than $225,000. Although Mr. Trinkle died in 1939, two years before the completion of the project, the building bears his name in honor of his efforts on behalf of the institution. There was no formal dedication when the building opened as a library because of diverted attention to World War II. The architect, J. Binford Walford of Richmond, also designed other Mary Washington buildings in the 1930s and 1940s.

Chandler Hall

Chandler Hall, built in 1928, was one of the college's earliest buildings. The building bears the name of Dr. A.B. Chandler Jr., who was president of Mary Washington in 1919. A new addition was built to the east side in 1938, creating the building's current appearance. Chandler housed the natural science departments until 1959, when a new science building was constructed. The hall is currently home to the psychology and business administration departments. Chandler has undergone a series of technological upgrades in recent years and now is wireless equipped and has three computer labs for business or psychology majors.

As you approach Monroe Hall, home of the political science department, the history department, geography department, the sociology department, as well as the international affairs department, you will be struck by its unique architecture with grand columns, large windows and impressive stairway. As you enter the building, you will become even more aware of the uniqueness of this academic building. With its creaky floors, fading blue and white paint and chipping murals lining the entrance way, it is evident that Monroe Hall is one of the oldest buildings on campus— oldest, yet most distinctive. Each year hundreds of students pass through the halls, sit in the classrooms, listen to lectures and take their tests that will get them closer to graduation. Many students will spend most of their college careers in Monroe Hall, yet countless others will suffer through the required general education class they are being forced to take while they would much rather be attending classes in Jepson or Combs Hall. Either way, most every student that attends the University of Mary Washington is destined to experience the creaky floors and chipping paint that contributes to the unique character of Monroe Hall.

Melchers Hall, home to the Studio Art and Art History Departments, was built in 1951 and is named for internationally known artist, Gari Melchers. A variety of classes are offered in this building including, Art History, Ceramics, Sculpture, Photography, Print Making, 3D design and Drawing. Melchers Hall, along with DuPont and Pollard, make up UMW's Fine Arts Complex.

DuPont Hall

Today, DuPont Hall is located on the former site of Mary Washington College Golf Course. Jessie Ball DuPont Hall was dedicated on September 29, 1951, with a ceremony including a speech by former Virginia governor, Colgate W. Darden. When the building was finished, costs totaled an impressive $1,143,556. DuPont Hall, which has always housed the Fine Arts Departments, was named in honor of Mrs. Alfred I. DuPont, a native of the northern neck of Virginia and the closest living relative of Mary Ball Washington, UMW's namesake. Besides being kin, Jessie Ball DuPont established a scholarship fund in the 1950s, in honor of Mary Washington. Today, DuPont Hall houses the Theater and Dance Departments and is connected to Melchers and Pollard Halls. It is also home to the Klein Theater, as well as a black-box theater named Studio 115. The facilities there include scene and costume shops, design labs, a management office, an acting studio, a seminar room and two dance suites.

Pollard Hall

Pollard Hall, one of the University of Mary Washington's many academic buildings, is occupied by the Music Department; it is located at the western end of campus. There are three floors to this building: the first houses offices, practice rooms/teaching studios, instrument storage lockers, and the instrumental ensembles rehearsal room; on the second floor, there are offices, teaching studios, a vocal rehearsal room, music resource center, computer lab, and a seminar room; the third floor is used as a recital hall. The building also contains a variety of the Music Department's sound and video recordings, scores, and books. Throughout the year, Pollard Hall hosts public performances by students and faculty, sometimes in conjunction with the Community Orchestra.

Jepson Hall

The Jepson Science Center opened in the fall of 1998. Its 75,000 square feet currently house the four natural science departments: chemistry, biology, geology, and physics. The majority of facility's labs can hold 28 students and come equipped with gas, internet and various other technologies. There is also the Mary W. Pinschmidt Lecture Hall, which can hold 80 students and was named for a long time biology professor. Recently, the Chemistry Department has acquired a Scanning, Tunneling and Atomic Force Microscope using a NSF Major Research Grant, proving Mary Washington to be at the forefront of liberal arts education.

Goolrick Hall was named after C. O'Connor Goolrick, a man widely acclaimed as the "Father of Mary Washington College." He was a graduate of the Virginia Military Institute, as well as the Law School at the University of Virginia. Elected to the Virginia House of Delegates in 1908, he later served in the state Senate and as president of the Virginia Bar Association. The building was announced to be built in 1960. Two months after the announcement, C. O'Connor Goolrick, by then well into his eighties, died of a heart attack. Before he died he was said to have been deeply moved and humbly appreciative of the building named in his honor. The building began in September of 1967 and was completed in September 1969, costing a grand total of $1,755,000 and an extra $53,909 for equipment. Today, Goolrick Hall houses the original swimming pool, dance studios, and gymnasiums of the sixties, as well as the Fitness Center with its various exercise equipment. The extensive physical education activities and recreational programs were on the cutting edge when Goolrick was built and set a precedent for the innovative programs widely used by Mary Washington students today.

Simpson Library

The three-story Simpson Library is an impressive center of learning on campus, housing over 350,000 books, 1,500 periodicals and multiple other forms of reference materials. Named for Dr. Grellet C. Simpson, chancellor of the college from 1956-1974, Simpson Library keeps Mary Washington's students stocked with reading material for work and play, including a newly opened section, "Just for Fun." Materials are available over the internet, thanks to an electronic database accessible to students 24 hours a day.

Singin' to a New Tune

A Capella groups make their own music

Mary Washington was home to four a cappella groups. BellAcappella was the all-female treble voice group. Invoice was an all-male group, and Symfonics and Una Voce were coed groups. All four were student-run and provided an opportunity for students to showcase their vocal talents in both campus and community events. Each group held auditions to recruit new members and then presented several popular concerts throughout the year. Some groups even had the opportunity to produce a CD. In addition, all four clubs made special appearances at campus events.

Worshipping Together

Clubs reach out to all religions

Once again this year, UMW was home to numerous religious organizations. The Hillel Foundation invited students of Jewish faith or those interested in Judaism to gather together. The group promoted Friday night services at the local Beth Shalom Temple and also hosted various activities based on the Jewish calendar. The Islamic Student Association also planned campus-wide activities throughout the year to promote awareness of Islam. Student-organized religious clubs are one way for Mary Washington students to meet more of their fellow students to celebrate commonalities of faith and also the diversity of faiths on campus. The Hillel Foundation and the Islamic Student Association represent two of the multiple options for students to worship with others of their faith on campus.

Anyone for Some Ultimate?

*Men's and Women's frisbee

Ultimate Frisbee was one of the most popular club sports this year, especially during the warmer months. The non-collegiate sport allowed people of various experience levels to participate on teams. There were women's and men's teams; both groups were dedicated to helping players develop their skills. Also, along with the College Association of Ultimate Frisbee, the UMW teams prepped and sponsored their players for competitions with other Virginia colleges. In the mean time, everyone enjoyed tossing a frisbee on Ball Circle.

The dance team consisted of eleven members this year, led by captains Jenni Moore and Tasha Kowaichuk. Tryouts were held in the fall and spring with several experienced dancers and old members auditioning. The dancers practiced at least three days a week, with increasing frequency around performance and competition time. Dance styles for this year included innovations of Pom, Jazz, and Hip-Hop dance. The dancers performed during major college events including men's basketball home games, the homecoming parade and soccer game. They also performed at various dance shows on campus, and dance competitions in the spring.

Throughout the year, Enigma indoor guard worked hard to develop a choreography and make sure it was perfect. The group performed to a song called "Battle Flag" and competed across the state. As always, this year's dance team and Enigma guard provided students with entertaining displays of athleticism and creativity fused with modern flair.

Donkeys & Elephants

Clubs involve students in politics

The University of Mary Washington has a variety of political organizations on campus. Both of the major parties are equally represented, by the College Republicans and the Young Democrats, respectively. Main objectives for the two clubs include promoting platforms, volunteering in local campaigns, studying current events, and participating in community service. Mary Washington also hosts representative clubs from other political groups, such as the Anarchist Social Theory Club, providing an opportunity for students to discuss alternative theories of government. Political organizations on campus provide students with opportunities to get informed and involved at the state and national levels of their programs.

Serving the Student Body

Student government provides campus activities

Two of the largest groups on campus included the Student Government Association and the Association of Residence Halls. The Student Government Association, or SGA, had one main purpose: to represent the students at UMW. There were many organizations under the umbrella of the SGA. One was the Association of Residence Halls, or ARH. The ARH provided representation and programming for all residential students on campus. Throughout the year, ARH put on many programs in conjunction with the SGA, serving to facilitate involvement of students on campus. Programs included Friday Night Dry, the annual Powder Puff game, and various activities held during Homecoming Week.

Representatives from the Judicial Review Board and the Honor Council also served on the SGA and facilitated an important link between student government and the judicial and honor systems on campus. Every organization within the SGA existed to make the life of every student at Mary Washington better.

Honor & Justice

Clubs keep order on campus

The University of Mary Washington takes great pride in its Honor System. The Judicial Review Board and Honor Council are two organizations that strive to uphold the Honor Code with the help of the students and faculty. The Honor Council is a judicial body selected and administered by the students, for the students; it is responsible for investigating and trying cases regarding violations involving lying, cheating and stealing. The Honor Council is also responsible for maintaining and amending the Honor Constitution when necessary. The Judicial Review Board is a student-run board that consists of an elected president, vice president, and five representatives from each class. The JRB has a faculty advisor who is the Director of Judicial Affairs and Community Responsibility. The Judicial Review Board works to create a balance between individual and community needs and ensures that everyone has a safe and secure living and learning environment. The JRB also helps to uphold the Statement of Community Values, which includes adherence to the Honor Code, the right of every individual to be treated with dignity and respect, the respect and acceptance of diversity in our community, and freedom of intellectual inquiry in the pursuit of truth.

Do Good

COAR makes a difference

The Community Outreach and Resources (COAR) office provides a home for volunteer programs with opportunities for on-campus as well as community involvement. Activities falling under the COAR umbrella include Make a Difference Day and building homes with Habitat for Humanity during spring break, as well as a host of other programs. Students are welcome to join COAR or simply volunteer on a per program basis. The goal of all COAR activities is to promote the ability of volunteers to touch the lives of others, making a difference one person at a time.

Lending a Helping Hand...

Students know how to have fun and get involved!

Giving back to the community was a huge theme for student organizations this year. Mortar Board, a national senior honorary recognized students who were excellent leaders in the classroom and in the community. Circle K provided a club basis for group projects and outreaches to the surrounding Fredericksburg area. Rotaract, another service club united students under the banner of "Service Above Self," and was sponsored by the local Stafford Rotary Club. Together these clubs showed the Fredericksburg community that Mary Washington students were all heart, and willing to work with others to make the world a better place.

Celebration of Differences

Diversity organizations in action

There are a variety of associations that promote diversity on campus. PRISM (People for the Rights of Individuals of Sexual Minorities) is an organization that advocates gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgendered rights, while providing a safe and comfortable environment for people of all genders and sexualities. The Black Student Association (BSA) raises awareness about the cultures and history of African-Americans and discriminatory issues. The club also serves as a support group for black students on campus. During Black History Month, the BSA sponsors various shows for the celebration. Another association promoting racial diversity is SALSA (Spanish and Latin-American Student Association), previously known as the Hispanic Student Association. SALSA promotes the Hispanic culture in the school community, and acknowledges students of Spanish and Hispanic languages and history. This year SALSA sponsored a Colores Latinos de UMW festival that celebrated Latino dance, music, and food. These three clubs strive to encourage racial, sexual, and ethnic diversity. They are open to all students for participation or support.

Ethnic Mood

Elevates High

Students Celebrate Diversity

Diversity clubs on campus provided a great way for students to get acquainted with peers of different origins and share their cultures. The Asian Student Association (ASA) and Students Educating and Empowering for Diversity (S.E.E.D.) were two such clubs promoting a breakdown of cultural boundaries. Goals for ASA meetings included expanding members' knowledge on specific aspects of the Asian culture, such as music or food. Their main campus-wide event was the "Taste of Asia" Festival where students were invited to sample Asian cuisine, and enjoy an ethnic fashion show. S.E.E.D. spent the year focusing on acceptance and understanding the diversity of culture at Mary Washington. They hosted a campus-wide barbecue in Ball Circle during the fall, as well as a number of other activities during the year, to get students out and interacting with their peers. Although Mary Washington may not be considered one of the most diverse campuses, the variety of cultures within our community were definitely well-represented this year.

The Science Guys

Learning through trips and hands-on activities

The University of Mary Washington has several science clubs available to interested students. The Physical/Occupational Therapy Club, sponsored by the Biology Department, provides information about Virginia graduate programs as well as volunteer and internship opportunities. The Pre-Med Club and Pre-Vet Clubs are run by Presidents James Hackman and Allison Lockwood, respectively, and serve as sources of information for those wishing to pursue higher education in those fields. The Biology Club and Chemistry Clubs are forums where students with shared interests can come together. They participate in various field trips and volunteer opportunities. Science clubs allow students to interact with peers sharing their interests in a fun environment outside of the classroom.

Major Enthusiasm

Social science clubs raise interests & involvement

Several social science clubs on campus promoted the interests of a wide range of social science topics. Psi Chi, the psychology honor society, won the national chapter award for planning the Topher Bill Auction to support a local charity, as well as Psi Chi Symposium and other activities. The purpose of the Geography Club was to involve interested students in geography and promote geography awareness on campus. Open to all students, including non-majors, the Geography Club's primary events consisted of Geography Awareness Week in the fall and Geography Symposium in the spring. The Culture Club allowed sociology and anthropology majors to plan activities of interest, including guest speakers. Model United Nations gave students an opportunity to learn how the UN works. All of these clubs allowed students to become actively involved in their majors and to educate the student body about topics of interest.

Religious Organizations

Students show their faith

Mary Washington's Christian groups include the Baptist Student Union (BSU), Catholic Campus Ministry (CCM), Campus Christian Community (CCC), and InterVarsity (IV). This year the BSU hosted weekly meetings and encouraged students to share their faith with the community through involvement in choir, a skit team, praise band or their annual retreat. CCM's weekly homily provided Catholic students with an option for discussion of moral and social issues of conscience. The CCC, a conglomeration of United Methodist, Presbyterian, Lutheran and Episcopal factions sponsored weekly "Table Talks" at Seacobeck, encouraging students to come out for discussion of issues pertinent to leading a Christian life. InterVarsity, an interdenominational, evangelical ministry brought all Christian groups together for weekly meetings in Jepson, bringing in speakers from the community to address students with a Bible-based message, as well as hosting small group Bible studies held across campus weekly. Mary Washington's selection of Christian organizations provided an outlet for students of any denomination.

On Campus Entertainment

Cheap seats and Giant a hit

Cheap Seats Cinema and Giant Productions were two of the main entertainment organizations on campus. Cheap Seats showed current movies not yet out on video to students for only one dollar. Members of the club got into all the movies for free, as long as they helped run a showing of one movie per semester. The members participated in a screening party during the middle of the year where they ordered food and watched trailer after trailer of possible movies to show during the next semester. Cheap Seats presented a good activity for weekend evenings, as movies were shown at 7pm and 10pm on Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings during nearly every weekend of the semester. Giant Productions hosted bands and other acts to entertain the students, including OkGO, Phantom Planet, and the hypnotist. Giant hosted several smaller events throughout the year with a big event during spring semester to bring the year to a close. Other groups that provided entertainment included Class Council, the Film Production Club, J.A.D.E (Japanese Animated and Dramatic Entertainment), and SGA.

Just Keep Moving

Fencing and Cycling Clubs
know how to move fast

The fencing and cycling clubs provided support for two less common sports. The Fencing Club was for fencing enthusiasts, as well as people with no prior experience. During weekly meetings, the fencers divided into three groups: beginners, intermediate, and advanced. Beginners were instructed with the art and sport of fencing, progressing into more advanced techniques throughout the year. Also, the club sponsored and prepared the advanced fencers for regional competitions. The Cycling Club was the school organization for cycling enthusiasts with a main function of providing cycling opportunities during the weekends. Also, many members trained to compete in cycling races as a team.

Come Glide With Me

On ice or in water, Hockey
Club and Terrapins work it

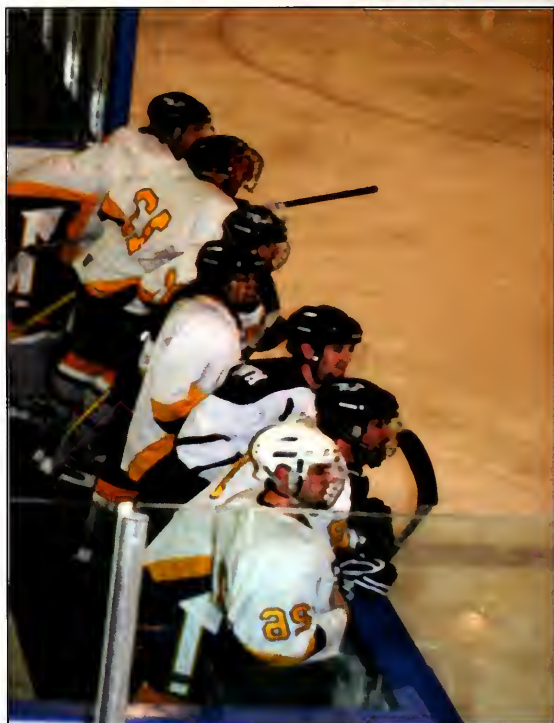

The Terrapins synchronized swimming club of about 10 girls practiced for and attended competitions on weekends throughout the semester. Together they created, practiced and performed synchronized swimming routines that demonstrated their talent and skill in an intense activity requiring much concentration and endurance as many of the moves were performed upside down and underwater. A second unique group was the Ice Hockey Club. The club provided a team for students wishing to continue playing ice hockey at a competitive level during college, and provided new players a chance to learn the rules and enjoy the game. A third group was the Martial Arts Club. The Martial Arts Club taught a variety of self-defense and martial arts techniques and also created an enjoyable and educational activity for students to participate in.

The Great Outdoors

Trek and Gun Clubs have fun outside

In a world filled with handheld technology and student schedules packed with classes, work, and other demands on time, taking time to simply enjoy the outdoors seems to miss the to-do list. UMW's club list, however, offers two excellent options for getting outside and participating in activities that celebrate the open air. The Trek Club sponsors outings to a variety of outdoor venues, encouraging students to participate in activities celebrating the adventurous aspects of nature. The Gun Club of Mary Washington also endorses enjoyment of the great outdoors, while joining members together with a common interest in the correct and safe use of firearms. Activities within the Gun Club include providing a safe environment for gun use for target practice. Students at the university interested in getting back to the basics and enjoying nature, or practicing their gunmanship are welcome to join the Trek and Gun Clubs in remembering why the outdoors are so great.

Students across campus could count on the Bullet, the student-run newspaper, to catch them up on the UMW buzz every Thursday. The paper worked as a forum for vocalizing opinions, local advertising and spreading the word about any issue of importance or interest to students, faculty, staff, and subscribers. The Polemic, a literary arts magazine appeared in its traditional black and white format, and provided students with a creative outlet. Both the Bullet and Polemic were student efforts showcasing the diversified talents of the student body.

Written in Stone

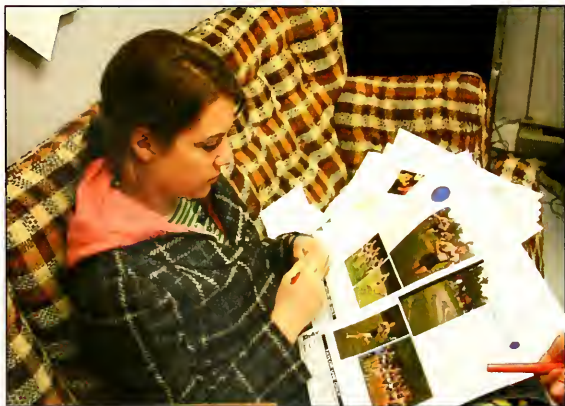

Battlefield & Aubade highlight student experiences

The Battlefield has been the most consistent and cherished publication in the history of the university; its first issue was printed in the spring of 1913 when the first graduating class received diplomas. In The Battlefield's early years, offices were located in Virginia Hall. This year, however, they were located under the dining halls at Seacobeck. The yearbook staff was divided into categories based on photography, copy writing, and layout design, with staff members working year round to contribute to the finished product. The book drew from unique events and guests, as well as the clubs and activities that have always been a part of UMW life. Sharing an office with the yearbook, the Aubade was a forum for student art and literature, providing creative outlet and quality reading for the student body. The official literary magazine made its debut in 1971, presenting a selection of fiction, poetry, and artwork on contemporary themes, much as it did this year.

Making Trails

Cross country team practices hard, runs strong

Cross country had a great year, overall. The season opened at the Shenandoah Relays with top performances. UMW men finished in first through seventh place, with JT. Newcomb and Jason Call taking first place, at 43:25 and Mary Naylor, Stephanie Grimes, and Amy Pasler finishing first for the women, at 34:57. There was a considerable amount of traveling for the team throughout the season. The Eagles went to McDaniel College in Maryland, where the women emerged first of eight schools, and the men provided five of the meet's top ten runners. Wins for the men and women followed at the Greensboro Invitational and invitational races in Pennsylvania. Under the guidance of Coach Stan Soper, the men and women's squads took second place at the 2005 CAC Championships, with frontrunners Matt Downs (2nd place, 26:55), and Allison Hazlett (4th place, 25:25) leading the way. Performances at NCAA Regionals put the ladies' team in 3rd place, and the men in 9th. Junior Allison Hazlett represented the team at NCAA Nationals to cap another great season for the Eagles.

Men's soccer makes it to CAC semifinals

The UMW Men's Soccer Team opened their 2005 season with a tie against Gettysburg on September 3 led by their veteran coach, Roy Gordon. On September 17, sophomore Vincent Kooijman's hat trick won the game and improved the Eagles' record to 2-4-1. Later in the month, a last minute score by sophomore Yusuf Harden secured the team's four-game winning streak and moved their record to 4-4-2. In early October, the two goals scored in the last 12 minutes insured a victory over Marymount with a score of 2-1. On October 29, the Eagles again topped Marymount 2-1 in overtime during the Capital Athletic Conference Quarter Final.

Soccer team earns winning record

UMW Women's Soccer, led by Coach Glaeser, was ranked 16th in the nation in a preseason poll. The season opened on September 3 and despite their best efforts, the Eagles fell to Rochester 1-0 in the 75th minute. They rebounded quickly, however, by gaining their first win of the season the next day. The winning goal was scored by Freshman Katie Patchett against Ithaca, improving the Eagle's record to 1-1. Later that month the Eagles topped Goucher 7-0, scoring just 1:31 into the game. The UMW Eagles continued their winning streak through October until they lost to York 3-2 in overtime on November 2, finishing with a record of 12-4-1.

Volleyball Serves it up

The volleyball team started out strong in the fall 2005 season with a 3-1 win over Washington College and the defeat of Hood College. The team held its own until an unfortunate pair of losses at the Gettysburg College Tournament but rebounded with a win at Randolph-Macon. The girls experienced defeat in the Capital Athletic Conference (CAC) matches at the Catholic University Invitational, dropping to 4-6 in the season. Losses followed against Marymount and Salisbury University, falling to 6-8 on the season. The team entered October on a winning streak, winning five matches in a row, improving the season score to 11-9 and 23 for CAC. Later in the month, there were a few concessions to St. Mary's and Bridgewater, but the team roared back with victories over York College and swept victory against Catholic University at the CAC quarterfinals! Overall, the volleyball team had an exciting fall season.

The Real Mother

Women's rugby knows how to kick butt

Women's Rugby was a club sport comprised of around 50 players interested in enjoying social and athletic interaction with other students. The team participated in games against other club teams from Virginia colleges such as Tech and UVA, as a part of the Virginia Rugby Union, often hosting games at their own Rugby Pitch in the Battleground Athletic Complex. Women's Rugby developed as more of a family than a mere team as the season continued. Players developed relationships with the other girls on the team while sharpening their rugby skills and travelling to and from games.

Wanna Ruck?

Men's rugby players show 'em how the game is played

The Men's Rugby team, or "Mother's" Rugby as it was more commonly known, brought together male students interested in improving their abilities in the game or experiencing the sport for the first time. Practices held every Tuesday and Thursday provided ample time for athletes to brush up their skills in order to conquer opponents from surrounding Virginia schools, as a part of the Virginia Rugby Union. The team had a large following and many athletes were drawn by the competitive yet no-experience-necessary attitude of Mother's Rugby.

Field hockey scores big at home games

The UMW field hockey team had some tough competition this year but, by midseason, it was already clear that the Eagles' hard work was rewarding. Numerous accomplishments were made by individual players throughout the season, even as the team faced stiff competition from other schools. The season was off to a slow start, with losses to Johns Hopkins and Lebanon Valley College in November. But things picked up with two quick wins at Goucher College and York College of Pennsylvania. Other highlights from away games included wins at Dickinson College and Virginia Wesleyan College. The Eagles also triumphed in numerous home games which included wins against Roanoke, Bridgewater, Sweet Briar, Randolph-Macon, and York Colleges. The 2005 team, made up of 24 students, was led by Coach Dana Hall, a veteran of fifteen years at Mary Washington. The captains of the team this year were Brynn Maguire, Colleen Dunn, Meghan Punaro, and Caitlin O'Leary.

Swim team breaks records

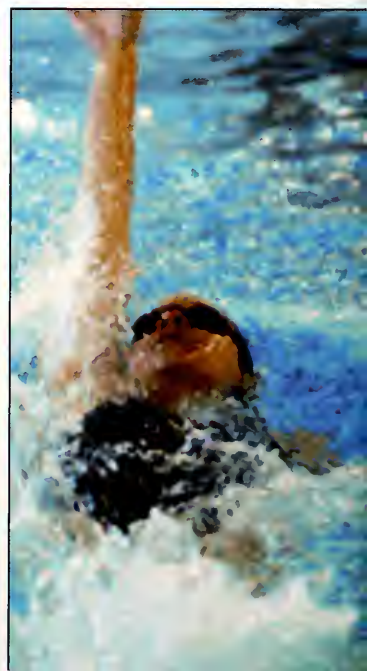

The 2005 - 2006 swim team, consisting of 15 men and 19 women, had a very successful season. The combined talent of the members resulted in several broken records, a continuation of the success of the team from the previous year. The swim team is hailed as one of the most successful athletic programs at the University of Mary Washington. The current coach, Matt Kinney, has been coaching here for over ten years, and in those ten years, nearly every school and conference record has been broken several times over by both the men's and women's squads. The University of Mary Washington swim team is a member of the Capital Athletic Conference and is in Division III of the NCAA. After the impressive outcome of last season, expectations were high for the incoming team, but those expectations were exceeded as the Eagles were named CAC Champions for both the men's and women's team.

Women's basketball team scores big

The Women's Basketball team kicked off the 2005-2006 season with a bang, crushing their first seven opponents, including their first two home games against Washington & Lee, and Catholic University. The ladies then headed off to Honolulu, where they competed in the "Hoop N Surf Classic." Coached by Deena Applebury, the NCAA Division III team has experienced increasing success, building up to this third year of Applebury's guidance. The team's success came from the combined efforts of 12 players, of which, only one was a senior. Whether at home in Goolrick Gym, visiting schools throughout the Mid-Atlantic region, or venturing across the country, the Eagles showed they mean business.

Men's team kicks off season with a win

The 2005 Men's Basketball team included thirteen players; six of these players were newcomers. Head Coach Rod Wood led the team for his tenth season at Mary Washington, assisted by the Associate Head Coach Dan Bairley and four assistant coaches. Under such leadership, the Eagles started their season off with a 6450 win against Southwestern University on November 18th in Lexington, VA and played their first home game, against Catholic University, on November 30th. They continued to face many challenging opponents like Shenandoah University, Salisbury University, and York College, once again making Mary Washington proud of the victorious Eagles.

Nothing LAX About It

The women's lacrosse team was led by their coach, Dana Hall, in her sixteenth season at UMW. The Eagles started their season out strong topping Sweet Briar College 19-4 with Junior Kaitlyn Barker scoring five goals in the first thirty minutes. They continued their winning season to be ranked 16th in their division, thanks to teamwork and great leadership from Coach Hall as well as five outstanding seniors. Victories over Ithaca, Goucher, Greensboro, and Guilford Colleges, among others, proved the Eagles were ready for anything. A decidedly successful season paved the way for the women's lacrosse team next year.

The men's lacrosse team started the season out strong with their first win over the Hampden- Sydney College Tigers. Freshman Sean Brown scored the first two goals and Sophomore Brad Buck made an impressive eight saves. The win was followed by three losses, but the Eagles recovered and topped Catholic University 5- 3 on March 21st. Despite the ups and downs of a difficult and competitive season, the Eagles, led by their head coach of sixteen years, Kurt Glaeser, headed into the CAC tournament and represented Mary Washington with pride on the field.

Women's tennis shows their competitive side

After an early stumble, the women's tennis team recovered charge of the court and stormed into their second season under the coaching guidance of UMW alumnus Patrick Catullo. The team, comprised of seven freshmen, two sophomores and one senior fought together to vanquish Kenyon College and George Mason, among others. Practicing in the newly finished University Tennis Center, the ladies sharpened their skills and improved their game, constantly on the prowl for another win. The 2005-06 Eagles succeeded in carrying on the Mary Washington tradition of success.

Men's Tennis players receive national rankings

The mens' tennis team fought its way to victory in an exciting season. Led by Todd Helbling, Eagles' coach since 1999, the university's newly opened indoor tennis facility was put to good use in honing the skills of a relatively young group including only 4 returning players. Doubles pair senior Paul Bristow, and freshman Randy Loden were a perfect example of how the team ushered in a talented group of newcomers, and paired their strengths with the talent and experience of more seasoned players. Bristow and Loden captured the ITA Regional Doubles title, and set the stage for the success of the 2005-06 Eagles. Once again, the mens' tennis team made it clear that the Eagles are a force to be reckoned with.

Breaking Records

Team is strong both on the track and in the field

The track season kicked off in December with success for the men's and women's teams at the CNU Lidlifter in December, where Carissa Culbreath and Matt Heidman broke school records and set the season off with a bang. Record-setting didn't end there, with continued success throughout the season. In February, freshman Mai Winchester broke the school record for the 60 hurdles with a time of 9.79 seconds. The accolades continued to roll in for the amazing team, led by Coach Stan Soper, a guiding force in Eagles athletics since 1984. Whether indoors or out, on the track or in the field, the 2006 Eagles track team continued the Mary Washington tradition of excellence.

Something to Cheer About

Cheerleaders lead in spirit

Mary Washington sports fans never lacked for something to cheer about, however, having someone to pump up the crowd never hurt. The 20052006 cheerleading team took pep to new levels, cheering at men's and women's basketball games. Cheerleading was a popular club sport, open to those with past experience as well as those just beginning to develop an interest in cheering. The number of participants on the squad was limited only by the availability of uniforms. Members prepared routines for not only the UMW crowd, but also for competitions against other school cheerleading teams in the state. Cheerleaders learned awesome stunts, made new friends, and enjoyed being part of a group proudly representing the Eagles.

Great season for Eagles softball

The softball team opened the season by sweeping a doubleheader from Messiah College at the Battleground on February 25th. Off to an excellent start, the Eagles set out to battle a number of worthy opponents, totaling thirty regular season games. The team featured a batch of relatively young players, led by two seniors, Erin Rantz and Abbey Wineland. Head Coach Dee Conway, part of the UMW athletic staff for nearly 20 years, successfully guided the 2006 Eagles through another year of tough competition.

Baseball team ranks 21st

The baseball team was ranked 21st in NCAA division III baseball by Collegiate Baseball newspaper before the season began. They started their season strong, winning twelve out of their first thirteen games and picking up steam as the season continued. Head coach Tom Sheridan started the team in 1988 and has become one of the nation's most successful coaches. The team played in V. Earl Dickinson Stadium, located in the Battlegrounds Athletic Complex. The stadium, which seats over 1000, was considered one of the top outdoor division III stadiums in the nation.

Equestrian team competes in various competitions.

The 2006 equestrian team prepared for competitions in their home stable at Hazelwild Farm in Spotsylvania County. Selections based on ability, were held at the beginning of each semester for spots on the 20-member team. Competition levels included open, intermediate, novice, walk-trot-canter, and walk-trot divisions, and the varsity team participated in eight regular shows in addition to regional, zone, and national championships, as a part of the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association. The team, guided by Head Coach Beth Boteler, put in another great year, continuing to prove Mary Washington's equestrian excellence.

Crew Can Do It!

Men's and women's teams row 'em away

This year marked the 8th anniversary of the Mary Washington Varsity Rowing program, previously featured as a club sport. The team was open to experienced rowers, as well as newcomers to the sport, with training emphasis simultaneously on individual technique and teamwork. Rowers practiced and competed in both the fall and spring semesters, and used Potomac Creek as a training ground. Coach Phil Schmehl led UMW Crew to new heights in his second year at Mary Washington. Coach Schmehl's style of blending conditioning with rowing techniques drove students to new levels of personal fitness and put the team in top shape for competition which translated to a very successful year for UMW rowing.

Annual powderpuff tournament another success

Of the many campus events sponsored by the Association of Residence Halls (ARH), the annual powderpuff football game was the most popular and best attended. For one day out of the year, the typical gender associations of football were abolished. Teams comprised of female players from each of the campus residence halls hit the field to show the plays they had practiced during the previous week, under the guidance of their male coaches. Although winners claimed no prize other than bragging rights, competition was fierce and groups of students surrounded Jefferson Square to cheer on their hallmates. Hotdogs and hamburgers along with lots of water refreshed players and spectators alike, and encouraged students to come out and be a part of the powderpuff tradition.

Moving On

Graduation day marks the beginning of the future

On May 13, the Class of 2006 took to Ball Circle, joined by family and friends for the celebration of an end and a beginning. Commencement speaker Marion Blakey, a 1970 Mary Washington alumna and administrator of the Federal Aviation Administration, spoke to graduates about the world of possibilities in life after UMW. Inspiring words, music, and well wishes enveloped graduates in a gentle hug from Mary Washington before their much anticipated release from the academic rigors of the University. To the Class of 2006, may the sunshine of success shine upon each task you set your minds to, and may you always remember your years at Mary Washington with a smile.

A photograph of a person walking on a path covered in autumn leaves. The person is wearing a green jacket and grey pants. The path is covered in fallen yellow and orange leaves. In the background, there are trees with autumn foliage. A large, semi-transparent orange circle is overlaid on the right side of the image, containing the word "people" in a stylized, orange, handwritten font.

Before the mountains call to you,
before you leave this home,
I want to teach your heart to trust,
as well as teach my own,
But sometimes I will ask the moon
where it shined upon you last,
And shake my head and laugh and say it all went by so fast.

Take time and enjoy!

Love,
Mom, Dad, & Taylor

In Memory of Dr. Tadesse Adera

THE OTHER, ANOTHER

When one door closes
Another opens
Could this saying be true?
When one dies
Another rises
When one wilts
Another blooms
When one is born
The other dies
One is blessed
The other condemned
One loves
The other hates
To bring to closure life's miracle
Must one mean the other?
Will the other thus become another?

Original poem in Amharic by Tadesse Adera, 04/28/05. Translated by Kebedech Tekleab, assisted by Gardner Campbell

Dr. Adera, you taught me more than I needed to know.
Bless you!

-Anonymous

Tadesse, you gave us the world of literature. We can't thank you enough...for being a colleague, mentor, and friend - Thank you!

-Connie Smith

Mentor, Professor, Friend...

CHOICE

If it darkens today
The sun will shine on the morrow
If it rains
It will let up
If it clouds up
The clouds
Will show a golden edge
A tsunami may unite a world
A tornado may knit a nation
But when the heart breaks
It's alone
One of its kind.
Common wisdom declares,
"Rather than living without having loved
It is better to have loved and lost"
To accept the end of love
Can there be a choice but to adore and suffer?

Original poem in Amharic by Tadesse Adera 9/10/05 Translated by Kebedech Tekleab, assisted by
Gardner Campbell

The glance
The smile
The wave
The tap of the foot
My friend, I'll miss you.

Senior year is almost over, and as I look back over my last four years, there are so many memories that I will cherish forever, whether good or bad: the beach sophomore year, everyday living with Autumn and Katy, the Bourbon Room...dun dun dun, England with my best friends, Chipot-day, Spring Break 2006 WOO, and so many more. I am so lucky to be able to say that I honestly spent these four years to the fullest and I have had a darn good time doing it! Thank you to everyone who's helped me enjoy these last four years, and I think you all know who you are!

Amanda Russell

organizations editor

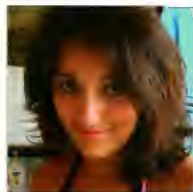

If they hadn't sent out a message in the weekly email that the yearbook needed editors, I probably wouldn't be typing this. But I did, and on the plus side, ended up getting a really cute shirt out of the deal. I learned a lot and got to be a part of putting together college memories. Oh, and we got cool pens, too. It's been a rollercoaster ride of a freshman year, and it's about time it's over. Time for summer, road trips, beaches, and no exams!

Meredith Hunter

Thank you: Autumn, for being so understanding and helpful. I don't know if I could have gotten through this year without you. Russell Howey, thank you so much for taking so many pictures, they are beautiful! Battlefield and photo staff, great job on putting this book together, it's gorgeous! My friends, I love you all and thank you all so much for making this year so much fun! I will miss you all this summer.

academics editor

I have had a fabulous time working on the Battlefield this year! What a great group of people, thank-you all for a busy, confusing, but overall really fun year. I will definitely take what I have learned with me as I leave next year. I have enjoyed the past two years at Mary Washington, the great teachers and classes, interesting students and, of course, Fredericksburg. To my best three, keep in touch; I will never forget all of our late nights, road trips and everything you have done for me... I miss you already. I will miss everyone next year and I wish you all the best! Don't cry because it's over; smile because it happened.

What an adventure. Autumn, you have been the most fabulous editor not-in-chief of all time. Juli, I cannot escape you. We hail from the same town, live in the same room and share the love that IS the Battlefield. We are truly FRIENDS of the heart. To my staff, thanks for being great, especially my final four: Claire, Jonna, Amanda & Xiaoxiao.

All I can say after placing so many pictures in here, is that I will be so glad next year when my Eagle Card ID picture is not my yearbook picture anymore. I also would like to say thank you to Autumn and the entire yearbook staff for an awesomely awesome, if stressful, year. All the fun times have made every minute worth it. And a short shout-out to all my friends - LOVE! I guess that's all, so I'll see you all next fall.

Autumn Brown

editor-not-in-chief, seniors editor

i'm not really sure how i ended up in charge of the yearbook and am even less sure how we pulled it together. i am so grateful for such an amazing staff who attended every meeting and always had their work done for deadlines. i know this yearbook is not the best UMW has seen, but this was one of the best groups of editors and staff ever. meredith: thank you for taking the initiative to get the yearbook going and for helping me learn the rules of yearbooks. good luck next year. juli & becca: thank you for joining yearbook staff for me and for being awesome. you're the best little sister and little sister's roommate ever. jocelyn: you're the best friend a girl could have. i love you tons and am pretty sure i would have gone crazy by now if not for you. kristin: thank you for being such a great seniors co-editor. it was so nice to know that i could always count on you. i'll miss you so much next year (unless i end up in f'burg). 2P4j: you guys are the best. always. to all of the staff: thank you for always being awesome. good luck next year! i just can't believe it's almost over. i'll miss mary washington and everyone here.

I want to thank everyone in yearbook for making this year so amazing. Even though it was really stressful at times, it was very rewarding being apart of this organization. I want to apologize for any misspelled names, Jennifer and I had to type in over thousands of names. Thank you Autumn for being such a great E-I-C!

Hillary Gatlin

student life editor

Hey everyone! I just want to thank the UMW yearbook staff for being such amazing and wonderful people. Yearbook has made my first year here at Mary Wash so memorable. Shout-outs to my family, suitemates, the Historic Preservation Club, to all the people who helped me find pictures. You all rock! See you next year!

Jocelyn Bodkin

faculty editor

Autumn, thank you for talking me into doing yearbook by saying how "fun" it is. While sending harassing emails and begging people for pictures is not my idea of fun, I have enjoyed our late nights in seaco and am blessed to have you as a friend. To Jacklyn, here's to 10 years of friendship and 60 more! Emily, I could not have requested a better person and friend to live with. To the guys, you all have become my big brothers. To UMW, thank you for the best four years of my life, the amazing professors, challenging classes, and a lifetime of memories.

Love is The Battlefield!

Genevieve Sullivan

organizations/people editor

I would like to thank Autumn, for getting me involved in the yearbook. I know that I was only an editor for one semester, my last semester of college, but it was a remarkable experience. Thank you all for everything you do, it has been a wonderful semester, and this is an amazing yearbook.

I have never had power over myself,
Nor was I mine from that moment
When she let me look into her eyes,
Into a mirror that much pleases me
Mirror, since I mirrored myself in you,
I have been slain by sighs from the depths,
And thus I was lost, just as
The fair Narcissus lost himself in the pool.

i spent more time this year complaining about having to go to the dungeon of seaco to work on spreads than i actually spent working on them. but oh well, they're done and now i am free from the tethers of adobe pagemaker for at least three months. thank you GLAM for making me actually do my work. and thanks Justin for not saying no when you probably should have.

"There's something to be said about a glass half full. About knowing when to say when.
I think it's a floating line. A barometer of need and desire.
It's entirely up to the individual. And depends on what's being poured.
Sometimes all we want is a taste. Other times there's no such thing as enough, the glass is bottomless. And all we want, is more."

full of SPIRIT

the 2005 - 2006 year came and went, leaving students with nothing but memories of the tough classes, championship games, and fun times they had endured and enjoyed alongside their friends. unique to a university of mary washington's size was the chance to see and interact with nearly all of the 4,000 enrolled students on a daily basis. keeping the school small has allowed a tightknit sense of community to arise from umw's involvement in the fredericksburg area and beyond. showing off their eagle style, students celebrated homecoming weekend in the fall with the theme of "shake your tail feather." in the spring, despite a dismal day, the multi-cultural fair was a smashing success, providing a glimpse of other cultures to students and community visitors thanks to the help of an army of student volunteers. to show that mary washington's students are all heart, hundreds participated in the walk for copprome, and thanks to a generously matched pledge, assisted in surpassing the goal of $100,000 to save the tiny orphanage in honduras. all these events and many more were made possible by the eagle spirit, and that was what kept the cup at umw half full all year. for your fancy spirit rock, eagle pride, and never-give-up attitude, here's to you mdub.
